

Where to watch birds (and other wildlife) in the Brenne Parc naturel régional - France

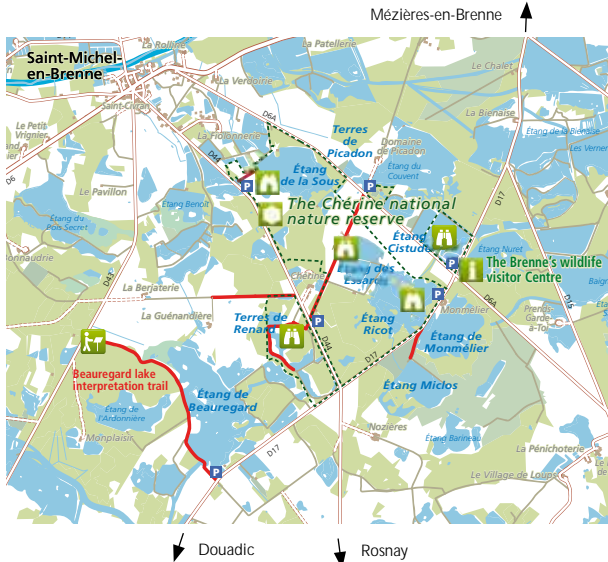

Parc
naturel régional
de la Brenne

The Brenne parc naturel régional in the centre of France is a naturalist's paradise. Well known for having many lakes and rare aquatic animals and plants; it also has many other interesting habitats and corresponding species.

In a calm, quite, friendly countryside a naturalist can take their time and discover a multitude of species, both common and rare, many of southern European distribution.

1a - Chérine national nature reserve & Beauregard interpretation trail

Within its more than 370 hectares the reserve has most of the habitat types, and thus species to be found in Brenne. Thanks to the protection they are afforded and the reserve's management many rare species of plants and animals thrive within its limits. These are often easily observed thanks to the provision of several well sited hides and various strategic access points for the public.

One of the best walks in the Brenne (Plus belles balades du Parc "Voyage entre les étangs et le canal des 5 bondes", (the 17 km walk takes about 5 hours to complete). Follow the green markers from the auberge de la Gabrière car park (off the map). For more information "Brenne nature" in English.

3 & 4 The étang Vieux & Lancosme forest

Less lakes and much more woodland, this area can be very interesting for many rare species; it provides a contrast to the rest of the Brenne and has several species that aren't found elsewhere. On very hot days it is also a way of avoiding the sun.

One of the best walks in the Brenne (Plus belles balades du Parc) "Luxuriance marécageuse", (the 3.5 km walk takes about 2 hours to complete). Follow the blue markers from the car park located on the map.

5 & 6 - Les communaux de Rosnay & the Riaux lakes

Les communaux de Rosnay (Rosnay common) is a major site for both Tongue and Loose-flowered orchids with many tens of thousands of the first in flower in early June. It is also good for various bird and butterfly species. Management of the site includes cattle grazing in late spring and summer; please don't disturb the animals if present. The Riaux lakes provide a good alternative to birding in central Brenne. Many rare species can be seen in an area much less frequented by the public.
